The Political Arena That Is The Cleveland Schools-(an editorial)

The fact that politics and religion don't mix is well known. The fact that politics and education are equally incompatible seems less well accepted. However, it is no less a fact. Those of you who live in the Cleveland area and have followed the plight of the schools over the last ten years have an inkling of the problem. What finally makes the newspapers is but the tip of the iceberg. I bring this to your attention because of the threat to the stability and future operation of the Alumni Association.

In the large sense, during the last ten years Cleveland has faced the involvement of the federal court, payless paydays, ten different superintendents, a string of advisors and consultants who have come and gone—each coming with a grandiose plan—each leaving in a better financial state than when they arrived, teacher strikes, busing, failed levies, state receivership and on and on.

John Marshall has not been isolated from the spillover of all these negative influences. One of the more interesting edicts this year is that all teachers will carry a full load of classes. While this sounds like a logical move on the surface, it does remove experienced professionals from duties such as cafeteria, hall and study hall supervision and also makes it extremely difficult for those people who have those specialized skills like year-book advisor, newspaper advisor, senior class advisor and alumni director. Those of us who believe in the total education of youth understand that often these "extras" are at least as important as what occurs in the classroom.

Fortunately, at least for the moment, sanity has prevailed, and our new principal, Mr. LeRoy Lang, has indicated that these programs must continue. Nevertheless, I think it is necessary to look down the road and make certain that the stability we have worked so hard to obtain with the Alumni Association is not affected by the ever shifting political winds.

In the future, I think it may be necessary to move the Alumni Association out of the physical confines of the school building. It will also be necessary to begin searching for a new or at least transitional director who can begin to learn the total operation. And finally our most immediate need is to obtain our own computer hardware which is capable of handling our increasing needs and streamlining our operations.

It is never too soon to begin planning for the future. When I volunteered for this job, I had no concept as to the amount of work that was involved. The same will be true for whoever follows in the future. I did know that it was too worthwhile to let fall by the wayside. Judging from your letters, interest, support, and contributions, a great many of you feel the same.

The biggest and most important part of this job has been building and maintaining a current address list. During the last year I have added the names of all graduates since 1930. The total is an amazing 27,000 names. Of these, 16,000 have current addresses. Current addresses come from two sources: from the post office following the mailing of each newsletter and from reunion committees who extend every effort to locate lost graduates. The cycle of five-year reunions is nearly complete so the future will be simply to maintain the list as changes come in. The computer we currently use has proven to be woefully inadequate for our volume. Complicating the problem further have been scheduling difficulties reducing computer availability.

To this end we have taken steps to locate an angel who could donate a computer or the necessary $3,000.

I have a great deal of difficulty asking each of you for more, but the simple truth is that your support is the only way we function. I simply ask that if you are in a position to help with this project, please give us every consideration.

REUNIONS

As the Alumni Association continues to grow, so does the involvement of more and more people especially through their reunions. At one time this year there were no less than 13 reunion committees in various stages of organization. Each of these committees went to great lengths attempting to locate missing classmates.
